

Steve [REDACTED]
Amir, does this bother you?

14h Like Reply

Amir [REDACTED]

Yes it does! I live right across from the fireworks. I don't mind when it's for Canada day, or New Years or something, but they have fireworks almost every weekend all summer. I have three little children, and when I tell you it sounds like the Syrian war, I'm not exaggerating. It wakes up all three kids and they can't get back to bed. I'm not against fireworks, everyone loves them, but when they are practically in your backyard and they are going off CONSTANTLY, it starts getting on your nerves. People go ape shit if you ring their door bell while their baby is asleep. Imagine what sounded like a grenade...hundreds of them.

12h Love Reply

Write a reply...

Write a comment...

[REDACTED]

Amin [REDACTED]

Matthew, that's the whole point. Save it for National Holidays. Paul doesn't seem to have any consideration for families with young children, because he really, really, really, really likes the pretty lights in the sky. When you live as close to the fireworks as we do, the explosion volume is scary as hell for little kids. Just to give you an idea of how loud it really is, an AK 47 will shoot a bullet and hit between 105-113 decibels in volume. Average fireworks range between 150-175 decibels!! That's crazy loud. It happens almost every weekend in the summer. Until you are willing to change the location of the fireworks to YOUR backyard, I think it's wise to keep your smart ass remarks about Mandy and Daniel to yourself.

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Write a reply

Write a comment...

